The First 100 Days: Time to Reflect and Adjust

Now that you have completed the first 100 days of school, it is time to reflect on the past to create a plan for the future.

Think of this as your halftime moment—and, if you want to succeed for the rest of the year, you need to make the necessary adjustments now.

Your mission is to reflect on your year so far. Think of your successes and failures. Then—in exactly 100 words—write what you are going to do to make the second half of the school year a success.

Maybe you are going to procrastinate less and turn all your assignments in on time. If this is your goal, then explain exactly how you are going to accomplish this.

Or perhaps you are going to focus more on algebra because that is the class that you struggle with the most. If this is the case, explain specifically what you are going to do to focus more on algebra.

Or maybe you are going to commit to reading one hour every evening because you want to improve your vocabulary and comprehension skills. If this is your goal, explain what you are going to read and how you are going to keep yourself accountable

So once again, your mission is to write exactly 100 words explaining what you are going to do to make the second half of the school year a success.
