Argue Why You Should be on the 'Nice' List

I am sorry to tell you this, but I have some bad news. You have landed on Santa Claus' naughty list. There was a data breach on Santa Enterprises' Network—and hackers have revealed Santa's worldwide naughty list.

Embarrassed by this breach, Santa has given every person on his naughty list a chance to redeem themselves. Here are Santa's own words translated into English:

Dear naughty kids,

As you know our tradition, naughty kids don't receive presents—not from Santa, anyways. This year, however, is different. Because of the data breach, I am giving each naughty kid from around the world a chance to plead their case, and land themselves on the nice list. So your mission is this: Write a letter to Santa Claus (that would be me) arguing why you should be put on the nice list. Give specific evidence of good deeds and things you have done that warrant this change. And be sure you support your evidence with clear and sufficient reasoning. Since I can't read all these letters, I have given your teachers the task of deciding whether or not your letter sufficiently argues your case.

So once again, your mission is this: Write a letter to Santa Claus arguing why you should be put on the nice list. Give specific evidence of good deeds and things you have done that warrant this change. And be sure you support your evidence with clear and sufficient reasoning.
