10-Word Stories

Creative muscles need to be built.

The more we exercise our creativity with words, the more persuasive and precise our ideas will become.

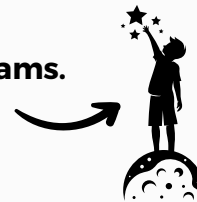

For the following activity, you need to write a ten-word story for each picture. And by ten, I mean exactly ten words. Not nine. Not eleven. ten.

Writing ten-word stories—you see—is an intensely creative task. To capture the complexity of a story in such few words seems impossible. It forces you to think differently—or outside the box.

Here is an example picture and ten-word story:

Difficulties, setbacks, and struggles didn't limit our vision and dreams.

Here is another example:

He thought he got away. News: hat found, man guilty.

Directions: Now it is your turn to exercise your creativity and precision with words. Write a ten-word story for the pictures given in the video.
