Write a Story About Sharks

Few creatures spark more fear in the human imagination than sharks. But is that fear really fair? That's for you to decide.

Your mission: Write a creative story featuring sharks.

You can tell your story from any perspective you choose.

Maybe you want to step into the fins of a misunderstood hammerhead named Pete. Your story might sound like this:

"Bruh," Pete said to his buddy Larry, "I get it—we've got sharp teeth and all. But seriously, do humans ever try to understand us?"

Larry sighed. "We're not villains—we keep the ocean in balance. If anything, it's their trash that's wrecking our home."

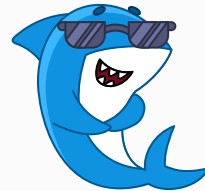

Or maybe you'd rather be a surfer on the edge of a life-changing encounter:

"As I floated, waiting for the next wave, I felt it—that eerie sensation that something was nearby. Watching. And then..."

Or perhaps you're the narrator of a legend:

"There once was a woman who tamed great white sharks with nothing but a look in her eye..."

No matter how you choose to tell it, your story should be creative, original, and, of course, all about sharks.
