LEVEL 3: Run-On Shutdown

TikTok is incredibly popular. People spend hours scrolling through videos.

LEVEL 4: Homophone Havoc

On TikTok, creators write captions right before posting and hope their video gets shared over there by viewers who hear the sound and think it's too good to skip. Whether they post two clips a day or four, they're never sure which trend will rise or whether it will fade.

LEVEL 5: Spelling

TikTok can make it easy to waste time and lose focus as endless videos pull users from one distraction to the next. It can also increase pressure to compare yourself to others, which sometimes harms confidence and mental well-being.

LEVEL 6: Paragraph Practice

TikTok has many positive qualities, especially for creativity and connection. It gives people a space to express ideas through short videos using music, humor, and storytelling. Users can learn new skills, discover different cultures, and hear voices from around the world that they might never encounter otherwise. For many creators, TikTok also provides a sense of community, allowing people with shared interests to support, inspire, and learn from one another.
